

SAYS SOY BEANS MAY SOLVE WEST'S FARM PROBLEMS

Suggestion to Prairie Farmer Made by Trade Envoy From China; Will Grow Well as Climate is Suitable

Montreal, Que. July 16—Canada

may find a way out of its depression through growing a Manchurian crop—the soya bean—which will not only bring Prairie farmers handsome prices for the oil extracted, but will provide as a by-product an excellent cattle fodder to help build up the Prairie's lost beef industry, according to the opinion expressed here Monday by Col. L. M. Cosgrave, Canadian trade commis-

"The soya bean," Col. Cosgrave declared, "is grown extensively in Manchuria where the climate is almost exactly like that of the prairie provinces. The bean lends itself to machinery cultivation and harvesting, and Canadian farmers should be able to produce it at a price very much competitive with that of the Manchurian growers who still are dependent upon hand labor."

C. P. R. D. N. R. Experimented With Many Varieties—Difficult
Crop to Raise—One Variety Brought to Maturity

The soy bean, or soya bean, newest suggestion as a remedy for agricultural depression in the west, has been the object of experiment for the past number of years by officials of the C. P. R., D. N. R. at Brooks. While in Montreal a few days ago Col. L. M. Cosgrave, Canadian trade commissioner to China, suggested that farmers of the north-west should grow soy beans. This crop, he believed could be profitably grown by prairie farmers, as the soil and climate were similar to the soil and climate of Manchuria where great quantities of the soy bean are grown.

perimental branch at Brooks, became interested in soy beans. More than 40 varieties of seeds were obtained from Manchuria and from the United States where the bean is grown extensively. Experiments were made with the growing of these seeds, and some measure of success was obtained with one or two varieties procured from the state of Wisconsin. The other varieties did not mature.

It has not yet been definitely determined whether the soy bean can

Has Many Uses

Where the soy bean is grown in the United States it is used as a forage crop and fertilizer. In Manchuria, China, it is grown as a forage crop and for the seed. Oil is extracted from the seed and used for paints, food for animal and man, and for other purposes.

GEM WILL HAVE BIG SPORTS DAY

The annual Gem stampede will be held this year on Wednesday, July 29. The committee is shaping up a splendid program for the day, and this will include saddle and bare-back bucking, horse races, novelty races, horse races for the boys and girls, athletic events, and children's athletic events. A fine list of cash prizes is being offered. The day will finish with a big dance at night.

Wednesday in which it was stated that Premier Brownlee, questioned as to the appointment, said that the matter would be dealt with at the conference, and that he would arrive in Regina with an open mind on the subject.

WEST'S RECOVERY DEPENDS ON WHEAT
 Indications of business recovery in Canada are seen by economists in many signs which are evident to the student of trade and commerce. An improved tone in the lumbering business, certain branches of mining and other lines of industry, taken as the forerunner of a general upward trend in all lines if business.

The latest move by which it is hoped to improve business conditions is the new trade treaty with Australia. This affects many branches of industry by setting up a preferential basis of exchange of trade between the two countries.

In the west, however, business recovery depends principally on wheat. This is essentially an agricultural country. The great bulk of the population depends on wheat directly or indirectly, on agriculture for a livelihood.

Agriculture is the basic industry of the west. It is the principal source of the raw material which it may be grown, low capital investment, and normally ready market and fair profit.

To transform this great wheat producing country into a livestock and dairy products country will require many years. In the meantime the wheat market will recover and this grain will again become a staple crop, a crop the production of which entails less risk and returns greater profits than the production of other agricultural products.

Trade treaties may come and go, governments may legislate and amend, but until the value of wheat on the world market rises to a price which will allow the grower a fair profit, the prairie farmer cannot expect to enjoy a return of prosperity.

"BACK TO THE LAND"
FOR UNEMPLOYED
 The province of Quebec will try a new scheme for relief of the unemployed. It is a "back to the land" movement, and provides for placing unemployed men and their families on farm land and supplying them with horses, cows, and poultry so they may make their own living from the soil.

Some may say this scheme is a threat to the agricultural industry which already seems to be burdened with over-production, but if the scheme works out according to the plans of the Quebec authorities there should be no danger of this relief measure interfering with the regular production and marketing of farm products by those already engaged in agriculture.

One team of horses, one cow, and only a little farm machinery will be provided to each group of five families. They will have only enough land and equipment to raise sufficient food for their own use, and the amount they may have to sell to meet other expenses will be exceedingly small.

Many of those who will receive relief under this plan have already had farm experience, and it should not be difficult for them to make a living off the soil.

The scheme appears of promise, merit, and its operation will be watched with interest by the governments of other provinces.

A GREAT GRAIN EXHIBITION
 One of the greatest agricultural exhibitions yet held is planned for Regina, Saskatchewan, July 25 to August 6, 1932. It is the World's Grain Exhibition and Fair.

Farmers living in almost every country in the world will compete for premier honors and the $300,000 in cash prizes offered for the best grain exhibits at this unique and world wide exhibition. A number of exhibits have already been received, and the management expects to be swamped with entries before the closing date, March 1, 1932.

Farmers who expect to enter exhibits in the various competitions should begin making preparations at once if they have not already done so. The exhibit may be grown either in 1930 or 1931. Detailed information will be supplied by the exhibition management at Regina. Not the least important feature of this great event is the grain conference to be held in connection with the exhibition. Here experts from every country will gather and discuss the various methods of production, soil culture, seed treatment, cultivation, combating of insect pests, various strains of grains best suited to various climates and soils, etc. Out of this exchange of ideas should come a wealth of valuable information that will be of value to the agrarian of every country.

SECOND INSTALLMENT
 Rackruff Motors hire Rowena to accompany Peter on a nation-wide tour in their roadster, an automobile they start. At the last minute Little Bobby is engaged to act as chaplain. They are waiting for Bobby to show up to make the start. Peter himself showed up to good advantage.

From ten until eleven o'clock the photographers snapped and the reporters took notes. First Rowena sat at the wheel, then Peter, then the two together, each bravely trying to conceal the storm of fear that gnawed at the core of his being—fear that the chaplain had changed her mind and would not come eleven o'clock—eleven thirty. The reporters were getting restless. Mr. Rack had his watch in his hand and Mr. Rack was taking business off at one side of the room.

A taxi cab pulled up at the side entrance and a little brown woman of a set slipped out and crept timidly in through the rear door and slipped up to the cashier's cage. She had to stand on tiptoe to be seen from within.

"Where will I find Miss Rowena?" she asked and her voice was a rippling low whisper.

"What name, please?" she asked from one of the papers? "asked the cashier briskly.

"No, I'm Miss Rowena—Roberta Lowell. I—I am—Roberta Lowell for the motor tour," explained the little brown woman with a roll of brown eyes and a display of deep dimples.

"Oh, Mr. Rack," called the cashier, "here's the chaplain."

The little brown woman looked ready to sink into the floor in shy clash work that Rackruff had a right to expect of them.

Rowena said that for her part she always worked best under pressure, that something in her expanded strongly to hard driving, and that she enjoyed working when she was nervous, almost, pasting with haste, Peter, in that anxiously gone, almost disinterestedly lazy eyes of his, said he didn't; said he couldn't work at all unless he had a breathful of fresh air in his lungs and quiet comfort in his heart.

"And of course," said Rowena curtly, "we will do it your way. Naturally you think good pictures are the most important part of the whole business."

"Of course," said Peter simply. Rowena was speechless with rage. She was glad she had always hated artists anyway. It made hating Peter now so much more natural. He was telling himself that he was glad Rowena was pretty. It would be pleasant, perhaps, her. He didn't care in the least about her disposition. This was a business trip.

It just goes to show the sort that Peter was that he never even suspected that Rowena was furious.

A sudden gulping sob close at hand startled him from his comfortable reverie. He looked sharply at Rowena, who sat rigidly erect and stony-faced beside him, blue eyes glittering with cold.

"Are you crying?" he asked doubtfully.

"No! Most certainly not! I hope you don't think I'm crying. I could make me cry," ejaculated Rowena.

Peter listened. It came again, loud and unmistakable, the gulping sob of "Don't you care, darling," said Rowena. "Men are all like that. They aren't worth crying about."

"You mustn't feel like that," said Peter. "He was probably so ashamed he couldn't bear to face you. That's the way I am. I'm more ashamed I feel the more—the more—"

"The more you stay, I suppose," said Rowena coldly. "Exactly," assented Peter. "But he knows how dangerous motor trips are," sobbed Bobby. "He knows I'm likely to be killed and maimed, or at least maimed for life."

"All alike," repeated Rowena grimly. "That's probably why he didn't come," said Peter comfortingly. "He realized that at thought of you going away into such terrible danger he would lose his self-control and break down before all those people. And then think how he'd feel."

"Well, he might pretend he broke down," insisted Peter. "All pretense, every one of them," declared Rowena wearily.

"It's terribly lonesome, going off on such a long trip without having Carter there to be ashamed of himself and feel sorry," sobbed Bobby.

"I tell you what, darling," suggested Rowena brightly. "You come around here and sit with Peter and let him cheer you up. He's a very good company. It's too lonesome for you back there alone."

"That you had to sit in the rumble seat!"

"Well, I've changed my mind. You see, I thought then that Peter and I would want to talk business and discuss our plans, and I never dreamed that every time I made a suggestion it would just lead to a bitter argument."

"Why, I didn't argue with you," protested Peter.

"I'd rather not sit in the rumble seat when I can think my thoughts in peace and not have my most innocent ideas contradicted before they are out of my mouth," continued Rowena.

"Why, I wasn't contradicting you," protested Peter.

But Rowena insisted, so Peter helped Bobby gently out of the rumble seat and was just turning to give Rowena a hand when he saw that she was already in, sitting erect, chin high and eyes extremely blue. So he got in behind the wheel and they started off again.

Rowena settled back in the rumble seat with a malicious little grin. After listening to Bobby's chatter about Carter for an hour, she leaned forward.

"Do you mind if I close this window?" she asked sweetly. "I'm trying to think out the plot in a story and I must have perfect silence to decide whether I want to have Bobby's Carter commit the murder or be committed."

From that moment the rumble seat was Rowena's own.

She seemed to take a morbid pleasure in providing comfort for her privacy, and often smiled to herself in complacency and not unalloyed satisfaction when she heard the steady soft roll of Bobby's voice regarding Peter with vivid accounts of what Carter and they had done, which caused her to apply for the trip.

Peter was in possession of a complete biography of Carter long before they reached Buffalo, where they were to pay their first official visit to the Rackruff salesrooms, and where he was able to make his first picture of the roadster and Rowena.

For all the sedation of the rumble seat, Rowena was able to break in on Bobby's flow of chatter long enough to voice her disagreement with Peter's plans when she wanted to, which was pretty often. — It went without saying that they did not agree about the financial management of the trip. Rackruff Motors, Inc. had agreed to pay all expenses for the car en route, and had allowed Peter and Rowena a joint salary of one hundred dollars a week—an expense allowance, it was really.

Peter's idea of the way to carry on was obviously the simplest and most natural. He said he would pay expenses for both of them, and then divide equally with Rowena whatever was left at the end of each week.

Rowena said it wouldn't do. In the end Peter agreed to divide each week's allowance with her immediately upon its receipt. Every Monday morning, each thereafter paying his own bills, bearing his own responsibility and saving what he could from the amount.

Even before they reached Buffalo he realized it would have been money in his pocket to have stuck to his original idea. Certainly it was no great drain on the expense account. Peter had been paying for food for Rowena, while motoring in the fresh air made both him and Bobby remarkably hungry, but that they wished to eat often, fully and expensively, it seemed to have no effect whatever upon Rowena, who ate so rarely and so little that Bobby accused her of trying to reduce.

"Well," smiled Peter good naturedly, "if you carry on like this for the next three months you will get rich off your share of the expense account."

The Pictures

There are two Ramon Novarro, apparently.

One is a whimsical comedian, full of the joy of life, love and music. The other is a tragic, dominant

One sees both these Novarras in a single picture in "Call of the Flesh," the star's latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, which is being shown at the Orpheum theatre this Thursday, Friday and Saturday, July 16, 17, and 18. Novarro starts as a care-free youth in the powerful story, and winds up as a character Booth, Barrett or Mansfield might well have played. And they could not have played it much better.

It is the story of a Spanish opera singer who sacrifices love and happiness on the altar of fame only to find that love is after all, far more powerful than the lure of the opera.
Charles Brabin directed the story, in which Novarro sings operatic as well as popular songs and gives a performance that is a notable milestone in his artistic career.

Dorothy Jordan is a delightful heroine as the convent girl he loves, and Renee Adoree a fiery creature as Lola, the dancer, whose jealousy dogs the pair. Ernest Torrence is delightful as the old singing tutor and Matthildie Constant injects comedy touches as the old opera star. Nance O'Neil is a dignified and compelling Mother Superior and Rosed Hopton convincing as the heroine's brother.

"Caught Cheating" is the feature picture for Thursday, Friday, and Saturday next week, July 23, 24, and 25. This is a great comedy about a couple of chaps, a couple of chisellers and a couple of gangsters in a merry mix-up.

Coming soon—the fight picture of the Schmelling-strubling heavyweight championship bout.
